If you are interested in private lessons, please contact the instructor of your choice. Our instructors contact information and rates are available on our “Penn State Ice Rink Figure Skating Instructors” sheet in our information rack and online.

Below are the Penn State Ice Rink policies and procedures for private lessons. These rules will make your time at the rink more enjoyable, by establishing a mutually beneficial relationship between you and your coach:

- All private lessons can be taught in 20, 30, 40, 45 or 60 minute increments, the cost of which is based on the coach’s hourly rate.

- When two or more skaters receive a lesson at the same time from a coach (a semi-private lesson), each skater must pay for ice time. The cost of the lesson cannot be divided between the skaters. The full amount of the lesson will be charged. It is up to the skaters to decide who will be paying for the lesson.

- When booking a lesson time with your coach, that time will be held just for you. For this reason, we require a minimum 24 hour notice to cancel a lesson. The only exception is for sudden illness or emergency.

- Skaters who are a “No Show” or a last minute call-off for reasons other than sudden illness or emergency will be charged the regular private lesson rate. Skaters owing for a missed lesson will not be allowed the next lesson until the missed lesson is paid for.

- Be ready to start your lesson on time. You will be charged for the entire lesson time even if you are late.

- If you decide to change coaches or just want to supplement your private lessons with a second coach, please speak with your current coach prior to approaching a new or second coach.

- All skaters must also pay for their ice time at the front counter prior to stepping on the ice.

Management of the Penn State Ice Rink has the right to adjust these rules, policies and procedures at anytime due to ice conditions or safety concerns for the skaters. All rules, policies and procedures are subject to change.
